- Successfully Ran a Surf Charter boat on the West Coast of Costa Rica

I grew up racing J22's and J24's, every weekend with my Dad on lakes around Dallas, Texas. Back in the day, US Nationals and Worlds were held for these two classes, and it was very competitive racing.

My professional career started in Costa Rica, as skipper and engineer of a surf charter yacht. I had to fix everything with no spares or budget, but somehow managed to keep it all going. After 2 years I found my way to Antigua, acquiring my first job on Donnybrook as race crew. And then continued on the race scene over the next few years.

Never Say Never was my first real engineering job, and I have slowly worked my way up in the industry ever since.
